DAYTON, Ohio, February 18, 1971 --- Courses ranging from the subject of contemporary America to real estate law will be conducted by the University of Dayton Department of Continuing Education.

Beginning February 22, Dr. Gerald Kern, assistant professor of political science at UD, will instruct the short course "Forces Shaping The Character Of America Today." The eight one-and-a-half hour sessions will include a study of the kinds of factors, attitudes, prejudices and aspirations that have shaped America (for good or ill) the way it is today. The course fee is $20.

For those wishing to improve speed and comprehension in their reading, Dr. Collier Powell will conduct a specialized course in "Reading Improvement." The 16 individual sessions will begin January 26, and will be taught from 7:00-8:15 p.m. Course fee is $55.

"Fundamentals of Ferrous Metallurgy", a Metals Engineering Institute course, will begin March 1, and is co-sponsored by the Dayton chapter of the American Society for Metals. The fundamentals of steelmaking, steel processing, heat treatment, testing and surface hardening will be presented in the 17 two-hour sessions. The course fee of $75.00 for ASM members and $40.00 for non-members includes text and all materials. The certificate of the Metals Engineering Institute will be awarded for successful completion of the course.

Beginning March 2, Mr. James E. Cross, Attorney at Law, will conduct "Real Estate Law" for the homeowner and investor. The eight two-hour sessions will cover such areas as acquisition and sales, title problems and landlord and tenant. The course fee is $25.00 ($40.00 per couple).

Dr. Francis J. Henninger, assistant professor of English, will conduct "The Human Event: Technical Writing" beginning March 3. This professional level lecture and workshop program is directed toward the administrator, engineer, scientist and businessman who desires to improve his writing skill. No technical background is required. The seven two-hour sessions will deal with organization of reports, euphemism and cliches, truth-telling and punctuation problems. Course fee is $55.

March 10, the first of eight sessions will be conducted on the "Generation Gap." Dr. Eugene Moulin, associate professor and chairman of the UD Counselor Education Department, will discuss the nature, causes and consequence of the gap. Course fee is $25.

Registration for these short courses can be completed through the mail by sending name and address with enclosed check or money-order to Nora Duffy, Director, Continuing Education, University of Dayton, Dayton, Ohio 45409; or phone 229-2347.
